About the Golf Course

From billionaire's estate to corporate retreat to private country club, the Village Club at Sands Point has become a sparkling jewel on Long Island's North Shore.

The Village Club of Sands Point, formerly the IBM Country Club, was once the estate of Isaac Guggenheim. The manor house was started by him in 1916 and completed in 1918. After his death in 1922, the property reverted to his estate and then, in 1924 was purchased at auction by his brother, Solomon R. Guggenheim. The Guggenheim Estate remains one of the finest and most impressive in New York.

The Village Club of Sands Point offers one of the country's most beautiful yet challenging courses. In 2001, the newly renovated 18-hole course opened and has grown in prominence on the Long Island golf scene. Designed by renowned course architect Tom Doak, the Club's 18-hole golf course takes golfers over rolling hills, sprawling hills and picturesque waterfront views. To play 18 holes at Sands Point is an exhilarating and memorable experience.
